

Anne-Sarah LE MEUR
DIXVERTS

Real-time 3D generative video installation

DixVerts features a black spot that sways and swells, radiant. It approaches, leaves again, then, just as it's about to fade, transforms into a red disk, surrounded by green. These discs and halos evolve in turn, but sometimes in opposite directions, and separately. Moving colors in an undulating frame, hypnotic and mysterious: surface or depth...? Substance or ether...? Matter or light...? Mirage or afterglow...? Abstraction or suggestion...? Anne-Sarah Le Meur radically explores the plastic potential of luminous phenomena in virtual three-dimensional space.

After two years of scientific studies, Anne-Sarah Le Meur arrived at Paris 8 in 1988 to study computer graphics. A doctorate led to a position at the Sorbonne School of Art. With a rich pictorial culture, she explores the potential of 3D computer graphics, going against convention and quickly "flattening" the 3D image into an undulating surface or intricate spaces, where abstract, organic forms evolve.
