Morphogenetic Tensions is a video essay about the origin of forms in our environment, torn between nature and artifice. Will the future of our world depend on the morphogenetic equilibrium that can be established within a new hybrid ecosystem? emerging in a "post-anthropocene" era?

In Morphogenetic Tensions, the graphic universe and soundscape structure a predictive path of this morphogenesis.

Sound materials and visual techniques combining 3D sculpting, 360° animation, drawing, diagrams and effects meet glitches that generate and degenerate new states of form and matter.

"Golnaz Behrouznia's workspaces reveal as much research from the bench of a research laboratory as from the display of a natural history museum. Golnaz Behrouznia's world borrows from the plant and animal kingdoms, their physical and biological models, to suggest, through a parallel process, an alternative evolution of living things. The abundance of her drawings is like an ecosystem of forms, lights and colors that contaminate spaces. Each detail expresses fragility, both in their capacity for meticulous expansion and in the evanescence of forms, some of which are bound to disappear." Emmanuel Cuisinier, 2020
